Close-Reading Questions:Honoring Our Past

1. Indigenous Peoples' Day is a holiday to honor the native people who were living in America before Christopher Columbus arrived. It helps celebrate the history and cultures of indigenous people.
2. The section is about the mistreatment of Native Americans that began when Columbus arrived in what is now North America.
3. The sidebar shares information about the heritage and culture of Amara's pueblo.

Close-Reading Questions:Should This Lion Cub Be in a Zoo?

1. In recent years, many zoos have replaced small cages with bigger, more open enclosures that are more like the animals' natural habitats.
2. Life in captivity is difficult for many animals. Some animals live in large family groups in the wild and have a hard time living in pairs or alone in zoos. Many zoo animals show signs of being lonely, bored, and sad. For example, a tiger will pace back and forth when it is stressed.

3. The graph shows the main reasons Americans think zoos exist. The authors included it to let readers know that people have a variety of beliefs about zoos.

Using a Map Key

1. Sample response: By looking at the map key and the shading on the map, I can see that the amount of land Native American groups live on today is less than it was in 1784. Native American lands used to spread across most of the continent. Today, only a few states have large areas of Native American lands.
